

"I think wallpaper can transform a room in a way paint can't," DeLapp says. "It gives it such a different vibe."

Opposite page: "The hand-painted Lucite backsplash was inspired by a vintage rug I fell in love with," Sara says. "We got a local artist to essentially replicate the woven rug in painted form."

The renovation, which included the kitchen, breakfast nook, living room, laundry room, a child's bedroom and his-and-hers wet bars, centered on the floral harlequin wallpaper in the powder room.

"This was the first thing I picked," DeLapp says. "It had all the colors I pulled through the house."

In the kitchen, she kept the existing cabinets and modernized the space with new countertops, backsplash and hardware. She painted the island green for a pop of color and installed bold green ombre tile and a custom vent hood to anchor the range alcove. An antique-brass chandelier with a petal motif complements the barstools' floral upholstered seats.

DeLapp brightened up the breakfast nook with patterned wallpaper from Milton & King and painted the dark stained trim and ceiling in a high-gloss pink with magenta undertones. She modernized the homeowners' circular dining table with new upholstered chairs.

"We had to convince (Tab) on the spotted velvet fabric," she says. "They're durable and easily cleanable, but also very luxe — we piped them with minty-green velvet."
